My darling Grace, —

Your Thursday and Friday letters greeted me at lunch to-day and I can assure you your advice will be taken as to rest. — Again duty calls me to stay in late tonight, but have taken an hour and a half off and had a good supper at Lawrence's on Madison Street and am now visiting with you. The sunset tonight was Venetian in every particular except water reflections, — I hope you can get out and see a sunset once in a while. — When I was putting on my coat at the restaurant Will B. Humphrey caught my eye and I shook hands with him and was introduced to one of his theological friends; — he seemed to want to ask about you, but did not get up courage, so I said nothing to him. But many of our mutual friends do ask and it is always an affirmed pleasure to let them know I hear from you often and that you are securing what you anticipated from Madam "P." — Yes, dear, — I do remember "Arcano" who was king, — he was a remarkable bass and was in my opinion a greater singer than the corresponding portions of of the east I saw presented in Paris. - That reminds me that never have I yet shown you those Casts of Otello and Lohengrin. - Today has been very bright and pleasant, this morning I came in on the Northwestern train with Leicester and George, they are a genial pair of boys and always make a little fun. - "L.C." was still elated over his trip yesterday to Clyde, - evidently the recollections of the Atlanta and Charleston S.C. trips have not grown cold. - Our friend McKay has just come in from his supper and is always filled with his genuine Edinburgh politeness with a handshake of real sympathy and fellowship. - Such a character is not common and it pleases me to come in contact with him or anyone else who seems so filled with life and spirit that is genuine. - You certainly remember my colleague Mr. Jas Harvey, he is about bushed already and today after lunch I sat in his room reading our text books when he rolled over on the bed and said "Wake me up before you go." — The dear fellow rolled and tossed and never slept at all as he was so fearfully exhausted. — I said, — "Jim, you have to look out!" — He knows it, but he is fearful in anticipation over the examination for the County Hospital. — Oh, you darling, for keeping me from ~~that~~ awful series of grinding. Perhaps if you are willing and if it is best I can secure an appointment in the St. Joseph's Hospital where Prof. Lenn is chief surgeon. — I have already virtually refused it, but if you think it the right thing perhaps it will not be a a bad thing, but only for a short service from graduation until Fall. — But you give some more of your good advice and reason if you please. —

Good night for now, I must be off to the college. Your own Clare.
7:40 PM.

Tuesday Morning at Home, — Good morning Sunshine, — All went well last night my darling and this morning mother asked me to mail you her new photo. — It is my choice for you, — and am sure it will cheer you. — My proofs will soon be sent on for your approval. — Now am off with a bye bye kiss for my own dear Grace, — Your loving Clarence.

The enclosed was by the lamp when I came in last night. —
